John's scenarios

Look at some of the information that was shared online about John during the summer holidays.

Decide if this information was ok to be shared or not.

John's mum posted a picture of the beach they visited for the day.

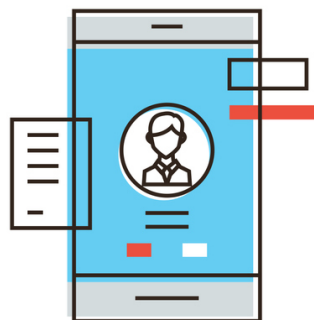

John posted a picture at the skate park he plays at with his friends. He tagged the location.

John completed his local library's summer reading challenge. John's dad shared how many books John had read, so he could get his badge.

John wanted to play on his computer with his best friend. He wrote down his username on a piece of paper for him when he was at the park, so his friend would be able to find him easily.

John had no one to play online games with, so he posted his name, age and username on a site to try and make some friends.

John had learnt how to dive into a pool. His Dad recorded him and posted it on social media.
